

ANNUAL WRITING CONTEST: EARTH CALLING

In the light of recent events - Greta Thunberg chosen as the person of the year by Time magazine or the climate summit COP25 held in Madrid - it seems society is fully aware of how climate change is putting our planet at a serious risk of destruction. To test how young generations feel about this, we have launched our annual writing contest focussed on the environment. We would like you to write a composition, a story or a poem that shows a critical view on the situations described in each group stage. These are just proposals but you can let your imagination run riot. Don't put a limit to your writing skills. The best ones in every category will be awarded a prize and the honour of being published in the year book. For further information, talk to your English teacher. Deadline: February 28th.

1º & 2º ESO "YES WE CAN"

Can you reduce the effects of global warming? How? Are you environmentally friendly? Can you imagine a greener, cleaner and safer planet? Describe it. What about your high school? What can you do to improve our green policies? Are you doing your bit? Tell us your story.

3º & 4º ESO "SPACE EXPLORERS"

You're one of the first explorers of the universe who has landed on a remote planet where locals live in harmony with nature. Your mission is to research how our planet can reverse the effects of global warming. Compare life in the new planet with ours and how the earth can benefit from this civilisation. Tell us your story.

1º & 2º BACHILLERATO "2050"

Can you imagine our planet in 2050? How would it be different when it comes to the environment? How have the effects of climate change modified our lifestyle? What's Burgos like in 2050? Is Arlanzón river still crossing the town? Tell us your story.
